The scoundrels who have been living by thieving and murder for so many weeks would, in a majority of caves, gladly rid themselves of the odium and responsibility of their dastardly conduct. Sixty of them surrendered to the Provost-Marshal of Mouroe County, at Paris, on Tuesday. There are hundreds who have violated their paroles still concealed, or else fagitives fleeing toward Arkansas.

The Tribune recently contained a local paragraph referring to an act of gross injustice to a respectable colored woman in a Third-avenue car. The way this thing is done here is different. If a slave woman with her mistress or master enters a car, she is entitled to a seat, but a free colored woman must go outside, on the platform, with the driver. This is a daily occurrence. It shows how partial some folks are to bondsmen and bondswomen; but though they may be lighter skinned, better dressed, and more refined in manner, how distasteful are those who are their own flesh and blood and rejoice in Freedom!

The United States Government has allowed the State of Missouri $125,000 to spend upon the State militia forces used to repress guerrilla outbreaks and preserve the peace. From Our Special Correspondent.

St. Louis, Oct. 24, 1862.

The news from the South-West of recent date indicates the virtual end of the campaign in that region. On Sunday, Gen. Schofield's headquarters were at Elkhorn Tavern, on Sugar Creek, near the scene of the famous Pea Ridge battle. Schofield's army is all in the same vicinity. scene of the famous Pea Ridge battle. Schofield's army is all in the same vicinity. Pickets and an advance guard were stationed on the road to Benton-ville, and in the direction of Fayetteville. Some little firing to place on the advance of eight miles from Elkhorn Tavern toward Fayetteville, but it was simply an effort to scare our advance by a few shots from the brush, and it did not succeed. Gen. Curtis is to-day expecting to hear of Gen. Schofield's arrival at Fayetteville. The probable future movements of Schofield's army are wholly conjectural. Nothing can be learned from our military men on the subject, and all your correspondents in this vicinity can do is to watch and inform you immediately. I learned the above facts from a gentleman just arrived direct from the South-West. He informs me that Gen. James Totten, at present in command of the 2d Division of the Army of the Frontier, has been summened to St. Louis to give his testimony in the McKinstry Court. Martial. Gen. Totten has now been in the field several months, and his absence from the Army of the South-West pending the possibility of a brush with the Rebels is excessively annoying to that officer. Gen. some stability of a brush with the Rebels is excessively annoying to that officer. Gen. Totten has been from the first anxious to more upon Little Rock.

Among the recent arrivals in this State from Dixie is a son of Major-Gen. Sterling Price of the Rebel army, Edwin Price, who recently held a Brigadier's commission in the Confederate service. Gen. Edwin Price was captured. The boats reached the shore in safety, and reported subsequently some of the operations of the control of the proceed to purole by Gen. Halleck. He remained quietly on his father's farm, near Brunswick, Monantil about one month ago, when he was allowed to proceed to Dixie to be exchanged for Gen. Premiss. He now returns in disgust, and having resigned his commission in the Rebel army, is exempt from arrest.

It is announced at Gen. Curtis's headquarters that young Price has not been exchanged. This is an extraordinary affair. Here is an avowed Confederate officer allowed to pase Southward to be exchanged, traveling through the country unmolested, and enjoying himself as any ordinary loyal man. He should be paroled at least not to fight against us. Fancy Gen. McCall returning to Riehmond and saying he had resigned, and was not therefore subject to exchange! Is anybody
